Richard has been an independent chair and director on many boards across a wide range of sectors, for more than 25 years. He brings this extensive practical experience to his advisory work in Westlake Governance Limited. Working in New Zealand and internationally, he has led governance reviews for large organisations, conducted over 150 board evaluations and trained more directors than anyone else in New Zealand. He also provides expert witness evidence on good governance and directors' duties.

In 2013, the World Bank's private sector arm commissioned Richard to write 'Guidance for the Directors of Banks', and he writes possibly the world's only blog specifically for board chairs and experienced directors.

Richard currently chairs one of New Zealand's largest home loan and insurance advisory businesses, and Hospice New Zealand. Among his earlier roles, he has chaired the world's first national weather service to be fully commercialised, was the first independent director of the world's leading goat-milk infant formula manufacturer, and for six years was the only non-Asian director of one of the largest banks in the Philippines.

WHAT SETS US APART IN THE MARKETPLACE?

In the governance advisory marketplace, the competitors of Peakstone Global fall into two main categories.

First, some large, older firms such as accounting firms, law firms and executive search firms have a non-core division that offers governance and board advisory services. Compared to these firms, our Specialist Advisors are focused on governance. Our practice is totally specialised in governance, not as an add on to a large firm. Plus our Advisors have substantive experience as non-executive directors or Chairs in the ASX, private, government and not-for-profit sectors.

Secondly, there is a myriad of sole operator or small firm practices. Compared to this category, Peakstone Global is a truly national firm with international perspectives. Our Founding Directors and Specialist Advisors have an unrivalled breadth of experiential diversity, from directors, executives, organisational psychologists, accountants and lawyers. You get one advisory firm with many minds!

Additionally, we provide a range of digital services which are world class, benchmarked and university accredited to provide meaningful quantitative insights.
